Frontline Reports

Interview with a British NSDAP/AO-Veteran

Part One

Introduction

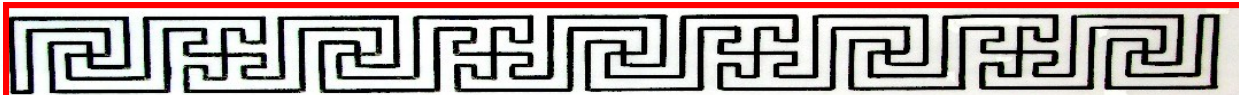

In this issue of “Frontline Reports“ we are going to interview a very dedicated British veteran comrade from Scotland.

The following interview was made for the “NS-Kampftruf (NSK)”, led by its Editor-in-Chief “Wehrwolf”.

Interview

NSK: Please introduce yourself.

British AO-Veteran: So I am today what the left describe as “pale, male and stale” - I am a white man in his middle age. Try saying something similar about the “chosen people” or other minorities and you will soon see the inside of a police cell, not if you attack the white man.

I have been a National Socialist since the age of 15 and was raised in the north of Scotland. I have travelled the world and had the great pleasure to meet like-minded National Socialists wherever I have travelled. I have been arrested for attending meetings deemed “unconstitutional”. And I have been attacked in the press and television for my efforts at recruiting and some forty odd years later I still proclaim our Creed and am more convinced than ever of the righteousness of our struggle and faith in our final victory.

NSK: Please describe your political views.

British AO-Veteran: I am a National Socialist, not a “Neo-Nazi” or “Nazi” I believe in a folk community based on Race. A community living in harmony with the eternal laws of Nature. A community where all are valued and each has a role to play in furthering the advance of the Folk and the Race

NSK: Why did you choose the National Socialist part, and not the “traditional” way of British fascism. Sir Oswald Mosley was active (again) with his Union Movement (UM) at this point, for example.

British AO-Veteran: This a good question. The left uses the terms “Fascist” and „Nazi“ as interchangeable insults and they are not. Fascism is a corporatist economic philosophy whereas National Socialism is based on Race, and Race is all.

Unity Valkyrie Mitford

The left is brainwashed to use these terms without understanding them. They do not even know what a National Socialist is. An example at University I was called a „Fascist“ I replied along the lines „I have never been so insulted; I am a National Socialist“. Their reply: “I’m sorry. I did not realise you were a Socialist.”

NSK: What is your opinion regarding the historical movement of the pre-war and also during the war time; National Socialist League (NSL), The Honourable Unity Valkyrie Mitford, The British Free Corps (BFC)/Legion of St. George etc.

Why did they fail? Could they be considered as vanguard anyway?

British AO-Veteran: These were all valuable stepping stones in the advance of the National Socialist world outlook for Great Britain. They did however, in my opinion, have an underlying flaw which led them to fail. They did not arise from the folk. They were largely led by members of the upper classes and were largely reactionary and arose as a juxta-position to the rise of Communism. The Fuehrer himself has said that leaders should emerge from the common folk and this is seen in the foundation of the Adolf Hitler schools and National Political Educational Academics that the NSDAP established.

NSK: When did you start your political work and what was your motivation to do so?

British AO-Veteran: I became involved in politics in 1979 at the age of 13. 1979 was the year of the General election when Mrs Thatcher was elected to power and the National Front fielded 303 candidates (635 seats in total) in that election yet only received 1.5% of the total vote. The preceding years had seen race riots and floods of „Vietnamese Boat People“ coming to Britain. I would in time become a youth Organiser for the Young National Front and used my paper round money to buy and distribute copies of our newspaper Bulldog. (The editor of that paper, Joe Pearce, would later re-cant his “racist past”. He is currently a lecturer at a private American Catholic College and he is considered a leading Catholic Biographer). At this stage in my political journey I was more of a Nationalist believing in “Britain for the British”

NSK: Please describe the situation of National Socialists back in the early period of the post-war era in Great Britain?

British AO-Veteran: The post-war National Socialists had been thrown in prison, without charge or trial during WW2 under the infamous Regulation 18B. When released their identity/ration cards were marked to identify them as 18B detainees so finding employment was hard.

Colin Jordan & François Dior Jordan

But National Socialists still kept the faith and the leading person at that time was Arnold Leese who went to prison several times after the war for publishing pamphlets on the Jewish nature of WW2 and in 1947 was imprisoned for a year for helping Waffen-SS POW's escape from their British concentration camp. Leese would become the mentor of Colin Jordan, who was undoubtedly the eminent post-war National Socialist in the English speaking world.

NSK: Since even the "home grown" Fascists and National Socialists were being socially outlawed by the Jewish controlled media, I guess it must have been a hard struggle for a young person during that era to develop a positive opinion on Germany and National Socialism per se?

Arnold Leese

British AO-Veteran: My views certainly marked me out and led to, shall we say, "heated discussions" even with older members of my family when I expressed my views and when a copy of "Six Million Lost and Found" was found on my book shelf there was some shock. Others would not debate, their minds were closed, they had seen the newsreels, they had seen the "World at War" documentaries they „knew“ what had happened. This shunning led to a reinforcement of my views, why was it unacceptable to say these things ? Why could you not have differing views? What were they afraid of ? I guess it all comes down to Nietzsche and „What does not kill me makes me stronger“
